Greetings from the Honourable Tim Uppal, P.C., M.P. Minister of State for Multiculturalism

I would like to extend my warmest greetings to all the delegates taking part in the Indo-Canadian Chamber of Commerce's India Mission 2014. Your efforts and participation on this mission to promote trade and business between Canada and India is of the utmost importance to our country's economy and I applaud you on your contribution.

As Prime Minister Harper has noted, "There is still vast unrealized potential for trade between India and Canada. Canada has many things that India needs to fuel her rapid expansion: energy, agricultural products, infrastructure, and higher education, among just a few. And developing that trade will create jobs and growth in Canada."

Canada's diversity is one of our greatest strengths and that is reflected in this mission. With over one million Canadians of Indian descent, there exists a unique and strong relationship between our two countries, and it is due to these strong ties that we are able to encourage greater trade.

I would like to express a special thank you to the Indo-Canadian Chamber of Commerce and President Naval Bajaj, for all your work to organize this trade mission and for your constant efforts to increase economic and social cooperation between Canada and India.

I look forward to meeting up with you in India.

Sincerely,

Dear Delegates:

A warm welcome to India! I am delighted that the Indo-Canada Chamber of Commerce (ICCC) is once again organizing this business mission and would like to take this opportunity to underscore ICCC's leadership in promoting and strengthening the Canada-India bilateral relationship.

Canada and India enjoy a longstanding and multi-faceted relationship, and our economic ties continue to expand. There is collaboration across a broad range of sectors, with a focus on priority areas identified by both sides for partnership, where there is complementarity between India's economic growth and Canada's globally-recognised strengths in resources and innovation expertise.

In the area of education, India is working to address its great demographic and knowledge potential through increased education opportunities for its youth. Canadian universities and colleges are among the best in the world and are working with Indian partners to deliver high quality education in India. Already, they have entered into more than 300 agreements with their Indian counterparts to share collaborate on joint research programs and student and faculty exchanges. More and more Indian students are seeing Canada as a destination for a world-class, globally-recognised education, in an open, tolerant, safe and multicultural environment. From 2008 to 2012, the number of Indian students going to study in Canada more than quadrupled – from about 3,000 to just over 13,000 per year, enhancing the important people-to-people ties between Canada and India.

Infrastructure, including project financing and investment capital, is a priority sector of collaboration with strong potential for Canadian companies. Some of the opportunities for partnership with Canada lie in: road and bridge construction; railway, port and airport modernisation and construction; and project and construction management as well as getting involved with mega-projects such as the Delhi-Mumbai Industrial Corridor initiative.

With respect to agriculture, Canada is playing an important role in supporting India's efforts to achieve food security by supplying close to 40% of India's imported pulses (peas and lentils), and providing a significant source of potash for use as a fertiliser. Canadian and Indian companies are also already collaborating on projects to increase crop and animal productivity, and improve food storage, distribution and processing.

Canada

In addition, the energy sector has significant opportunities for cooperation. Canada is already an important player in this sector – from renewable energy to nuclear and conventional oil and gas based generation. We are blessed with some of the largest energy resources in the world and have the expertise and technology to exploit these resources. Canada represents a safe, reliable and growing source of energy supply for decades to come, and Canadian companies can contribute meaningfully to India's energy and resource security.

Another exciting initiative that I believe will help strengthen the Canada-India bilateral relationship is in the area of innovation and entrepreneurship. Canada is committed to helping innovators succeed globally. Through the Start-up Visa Program, which was launched earlier this year, we want to help innovative Indian entrepreneurs bring their cutting-edge products, processes, technologies and services to develop and market in Canada. At the same time, we will provide support to Canadian entrepreneurs and high-growth companies to expand and succeed in India through a new structured program to be introduced in early 2014. These programs will benefit both Canada and India by deepening the entrepreneurial ties between our nations, promote jobs, growth and long-term prosperity.

These are but a few examples of how Canada and India are working together to address issues of strategic importance. I am pleased that the ICCC will continue to be there as a tremendous resource for Canadian companies to help drive deeper engagement.

Once again, I would like to congratulate ICCC on this mission and its concrete efforts to strengthen Canada-India trade relationship. I look forward to meeting you while you're in India and wish you a productive visit.

Yours sincerely,

MESSAGE

I am indeed happy to learn that Indo-Canada Chamber of Commerce (ICCC) is leading its annual India Mission 2014 in January 2014 to India for exploring business opportunities of different dimensions.

India and Canada have witnessed unprecedented close relations during recent years. Our leaders have visited each other's countries. The visit of The Right Hon'ble Prime Minister Stephen Harper of Canada to India in November 2012 has taken these relations to new heights. Aside from shared values of democracy and multiculturalism, India-Canada relations today are underpinned by growing economic and commercial ties.

The ICCC, with its exemplary track record is certainly well placed to play an important and growing pro-active role to further energise India-Canada economic relations.

I take this opportunity to wish the ICCC and its delegates all the very best in their endeavours.

India and Canada are entering a new era of cooperation with an unprecedented commitment to increase two-way investment and trade.

Beyond our strong people-to-people relations, it is clear that Canada and India have complementary economic interests. India is projected to experience high growth in demand for natural resources, and Canada has the potential to become a leading global exporter of energy and other resources.

Strengthening our relationship with India is a priority for the Government of Canada. We have made remarkable progress in the last year alone. For instance, the launch of the Canada-Indian Ministerial Energy Dialogue and conclusion of a Nuclear Cooperation Agreement illustrate the strong commitment to expand our ties in the energy sector.

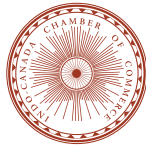

In January, I will make my second official visit to India in an effort to further strengthen our energy relationship with our Indian friends. This will be a robust week of engagement with senior representatives of the Indian government and some of India's largest energy players, investors, as well as with industry leaders in the forestry sector.

I want to congratulate the Indo-Canada Chamber of Commerce for leading a business delegation as part of the India Mission 2014. By exploring and embracing economic opportunities, organizations like yours play a critical role in strengthening our trade relationship and expanding our growing economic partnership. Your initiative shows how government and business continue to open doors, create opportunities and solidify our already strong bonds of friendship.

I wish you a successful mission and commend the efforts you are making to contribute to job creation, economic growth and prosperity of our countries.

The Indo-Canada Chamber of Commerce (ICCC) is cognizant of the importance of growing economic partnership between Canada and India. With trade representing 60 percent of the Canadian economy, deepening commercial partnerships with Indian business is an important factor in Canada's economic growth. With evolving methods in imparting content and innovations in pedagogy, educators in India and abroad are looking at new means of developing content. The industry is moving out of the conventional textbook medium and even CD-ROMs towards an integrated learning environment spanning multiple domains like games, multimedia aids, online sources etc. The concept of virtual integrated learning is also an emerging area where students around the world access teaching resources and material from any part of the world.
